With thanks to

Professor Steve Miller for his enormous help, encouragement, experience and patience.

My family, for missing so much holiday time so I could complete this work, and extra thanks to Mikki for inputting the data and Jeremy for proofreading and solving my many computer problems.

To Ron Rutstein for his help with the presentation of data.

And to all those converts who shared their stories with me.

Abstract

I examined the characteristics of converts to Judaism through the Reform Synagogues, 1952-2002, exploring the psychological impact of conversion, the nature of their Jewish identity and the durability of their religious commitment through time. Recognising the large variation in the Jewish practice and attitudes displayed, I also examined the influence of motivational, family and biographical factors on their Jewish identity.

Motivation for conversion was multi-dimensional. The instrumental desire to create family unity was identified as the most powerful motivating factor. The strength of this variable was found to be a significant predictor of the level of behavioural changes in the converts’ Jewish lifestyle. Counter-intuitively, this motivational factor formed negative correlations with ethnicity and a non-significant relationship with ritual behaviour.

The data highlight differences between the factorial structure of the Jewish identity of converts and born Jews. For converts, four identity factors were identified: ritual practice, ethnic belonging, Jewish development and spirituality. Miller et al. have identified three factors underlying the Jewish identity of born Jews under 50: behavioural ethnicity, religiosity and mental ethnicity. Survey data of converts has shown a clear division of ritual and ethnic behaviours, whilst in born Jews, the same differentiation is not demonstrated.

Like moderately engaged born Jews, converts emphasised the notion of affective identity rather than the actual performance of Jewish ritual acts, though it is clear that ‘on average’ converts have a somewhat more intense pattern of ritual practice than born (Reform) Jews.

The majority of the converts felt content with the results of their conversion but the relative lack of emphasis placed on Jewish continuity as opposed to the convert’s individual self-fulfilment, can be seen as an indication of a possibility that the conversion process may only delay demographic decline in the Jewish community for just one or two generations.

APPENDIX 2. INTERVIEW PROMPTS AND PROTOCOL

1. The conversion experience:

May I ask you to share some of your experiences and feelings about your conversion to Judaism?

What made you decide to become Jewish?

Did you receive the full support of your partner/his family?

How did you feel about the course you followed and the support you were given by the rabbi/teacher?

Would you have liked more after care?

How was your appearance before the Beit Din.

What was your partner’s reaction to the conversion?

2. Cultural, religious setting and traditions:

Going back before your conversion, (if you can remember!), what were the important religious and cultural beliefs, traditions, that were prevalent among your family and friends?

What did you understand about your Jewish partner’s family’s religious practice? How did your Jewish partner feel about Judaism and Jewish life?

3. Jewish life now:

Can you describe your Jewish life now, as you live it? How do you see yourself in relation to the Jewish community now? What rituals do you observe? What part do you play in community?

Do you have any Jewish family roots?

Do you feel Jewish? In what ways do you feel Jewish?

How do your children/grandchildren express their Jewish heritage? Has their been b’nei mitzvah? Have they received Jewish education? Have they got Jewish partners?

How would you describe the friendship circle that you move in?
4. Spirituality:

Have you found that the experience has helped you with your deeper religious feelings?

How was your religious/spiritual upbringing?

5. Love:

How has your own family reacted to your conversion?

What do you do about family events such as Christmas?

How have you dealt with family life cycle events?

6. Other:

Is there anything we have left out that you would like to share with me?

Thank you!

APPENDIX 3. CONTENT ANALYSIS OF INTERVIEWS

NB Letters in brackets refer to the source of the comment, or comments close to that recorded, as given in Appendix 1. If the letter are followed by an ‘-a’ that indicates a partner’s words.

Why did you decide to convert to (Reform/Progressive) Judaism?

Religious:

Prior interest in religion

I was, am, quite religious and at school was involved with the Christian Union (K). I was the religious one in my family (A).

Dissatisfaction with Christianity

Not comfortable with older ladies showing off their hats (A), that’s three people, not God (C). Abandoned my faith (E). Don’t believe in Christianity, it’s a bit strange to me (G). Never took on Christianity (I). Crisis of faith over Trinity and Resurrection (P). Trouble with Mary (Q).

Spiritual void

Fills spiritual need (A). Need for spiritual guidance (B). I was religious but couldn’t continue as a Christian (J). Religiously and emotionally in a no-man’s land. Strong religious reasons for converting – living with actual physical pain because of spiritual void (I). Trying to find a home (K). For a while into the agnostic bit, heavily into psychology (A).

Spiritual experience

Vortex, dream, led to acknowledgement of belief in God (H).

Feeling of destiny

What happened to me no surprise to anyone, seemed as if it was meant to be (A).

Mine’s a bit odd really because it’s something that I would have done (C). Partner: knew Jewishness of some kind in her (F-a). Inevitably walking into the route I took (N).

Lack of other religious identity

I didn’t come from any other thing, no family faith (D). No baptism, No confirmation, Nil religious education (H). Confused by religion so I rejected it (N).

Attraction of Judaism

Judaism is logical, it makes perfect sense (C). Felt Jewish, but wasn’t Jewish (G). Loved rhythm given to time (K).

A bit exotic, different (N).
Search for ethical basis of life (L)

Family:

Suggestion by Jewish partner (A-a, E, F, Q)

Awakening interest in Judaism of Jewish partner, wanting to be involved (N, D, C). Immediately question of marriage, question would I convert (E)?

Gift to husband (F, J)

Not for her at all. He’s Jewish, I’m not, it was what was needed. This was what was needed.

Pressure from Jewish partner’s family.

They needed a Jewish wife, want children to be Jewish (B). Partner’s parents disappointed, not nice Jewish girl (A).

Partner: my family put a gun to her head, almost (A-a). Gaining certificate for in-laws, in-laws had foregone conclusion I would convert (F). When pregnant, family exerted pressure and control, told me if I didn’t convert, husband wouldn’t love our children (R). Seemed only way to get married was to convert (B). Parents wanted son to marry a nice Jewish girl, pressure to drop her, she has to convert (M).

To spite Jewish in-laws! (M)

To spite own anti-Semitic father! (N)

Need unity to bring up children

Partner: wanted to marry a Jewish person, wanted Jewish children facilitate conversion of children convert as a means to an end (conversion of children) complicated to have mixed family (B-a, F-a, E). Advent of children started Jewish journey (A, G-a, R). Thought I ought to because of my marriage and my children (G). Only for the children (R). Need unity in a home (A-a).

Wanted to be part of Jewish family

Seen as warm and together, wanted to be part of this ideal family (B, O). Child said to everyone, ‘you’re Jewish’, but to him, ‘you’re not Jewish.’ Already involved as father and husband. Conversion led to wonderful opportunity to be part of BM (G).

Insecurity of proselyte

I thought that would have secured me in his life and his family life. I think that if I converted the more reason it will be for us to get married (B).
Urging of child (paternal Jew)

Child experiencing anti-Semitism, look I’ve been attacked for being Jewish and I know nothing about it, it’s about time you taught me. Child wanting spiritual life (D).

Jewish funeral of partner led to formal contact with synagogue (N).

Paternal Jew already as a child experienced anti-Semitism and anti-Israel abuse (I). Regarded as Jewish anyway (I, L). she had a Jewish father and she had this hankering (G).

Victim pathology – become part of a victimised group to legitimise abuse suffered as a child (N).

Jewish family roots:

Discovered after conversion

Maternal, Portuguese Marrano (B)?

Known before conversion keeping faith with my Jewish forbears somewhere (N).

Non-Jewish partner’s Jewish family roots (C)

Already familiar with Jewish way of life (I, K)

Welsh parenting similar to Jewish, family of prime importance. Put mother on a pedestal (G). Grew up surrounded by Jews. Sounds and smells of immigrant Jews in black (K).

Social:

Jewish friends

Wanted to belong

I wasn’t made to feel forced into it (A).

A way of life I enjoyed

Dissatisfaction with previous social alignment

Loss of faith in communism (D).

Met general need (unqualified):

Romantic and emotional attachment to Judaism (B).

For community, if going to be involved then be fully involved (J).

Historical/cultural attachment/Israel:

Enjoyed learning Eastern European culture feeling of closeness to victims of Holocaust (C).
Been to work on kibbutz (F). Immersed in Palestine/Israel, Six Day war like FA cup at home, interest in Zionism (G, H). Tried to volunteer in 1973 (H). Knew klezmer (I). Political work with Jews (J). Lived in Israel for a while (F).

Academic

Excitement of learning new things. Learning led to being hooked (D, E, K, N).

What was your upbringing? (asking the Jewish partner):

Lacking in all Jewish content

No Jewish input into family life (A-a). No religious upbringing (D-a). I don’t have particularly strong religious views in either direction, barely learnt to read (G-a). Allegedly Orthodox but not Orthodox at all (A-a, B-a). Mother, religiously a drop-out (A-a). Dragged to synagogue on the High Holy Days, learnt BM parrot fashion (A-a, D-a). Seder till uncle died (A-a). Evacuation as a child (D-a).

Israeli Secular

With Orthodox memories/echoes from Chassidic family. Anti-religious. Only knew Orthodoxy (E-a, F-a).

Orthodox upbringing negatively experienced.

But learnt more in Reform about why, Punishment had to learn how to bensch, Resentful of strictures. Remembers only restrictions, no joy, Hypocrisy of parents breaking rules when it suited them, Loved Pesach, mother didn’t want to know of non-Jewish boyfriends, desperately sought acceptance by parent of non-Jewish fiancé (G-a).
Afraid to acknowledge Jewish status

A loose connection somewhere, I’m almost like a Christian Jew (B-a). Almost hostile to religious life going back to the Pale (D-a). Became ashamed of being Jewish. Sent to non-Jewish boarding school, very uncomfortable with being Jewish there (B-a, D-a, G-a).

Part of clan

If you’re Orthodox, you can’t be kicked out (A-a). Being Jewish is being part of a clan, nominally Orthodox.

Brought up to look for a nice comfortable domestic Jewish life with kids, go to synagogue and cheder (B-a).

Not religious, but always been interested in Jewish history and culture (B-a). Jewish friends, secretary of Jewish society (JSoc) at university (D-a). Child of refugees (D-a, G-a).

Felt outside the clan

Out of place in Jewish youth groups, drifted away from Jewish friends, didn’t join JSoc (G-a).

Observances

Candles one Friday in three, always aligned to the community, cheder, b’nei mitzvah, sometimes kosher (A-a).

Spiritual

Secular but a spiritual seeker (F-a).

Convert's view of partner's Jewish upbringing:

No Jewish home

Family largely intermarried. Not leading any sort of Jewish life, difficult for him to marry anyone Jewish, presumed he was Orthodox, but family now largely Catholic, obviously, that’s why they married someone who isn’t Jewish, the fact that they married you in the first place means that they were not looking for a…whatever (A). Only went High Holydays (R). No involvement since bar mitzvah (R). Reform home, no kashrut but synagogue on festivals (M).

Secular Israeli

Hypocritical, wanted conversion without the religion (E).

Ideal family life (P)

Incredibly Jewish partner thinking of becoming a rabbi (J)
Incredibly Jewish Orthodox (O)

Very kosher (B, G) Orthodox home but learned more from Reform (G).

Attitudes Jewish (G)

Children from previous Jewish marriage married out, worries him (B).

What was your own religious upbringing?

Pull towards religious issues

I was the religious one in my family (A). Parents agnostic, but I was involved in the Christian Union (L).

Pull towards Judaism

The fact it was Old Testament was good, Belief in One God was logical (G).

No prior knowledge of Judaism

Not sure if religion or nationality. Didn’t know what was involved (E).

Push away from previous faith

Whole agnostic bit, heavily into psychology (A). Looked around one Sunday morning and realised, I’m not comfortable here, certainly New Testament wasn’t happening for me (A).

Convent school but no religious attachment (B). Abandoned Roman Catholicism (C), couldn’t cope with trinity (H). By mid-teens, couldn’t believe in Christianity (K). Crisis of faith over Trinity and Resurrection (P).

No religious upbringing

Mother pushed freedom of thought and free destiny, no reliance on God (B). Father atheist (C).

Family hostile to children receiving religious education (D, J). No thought of religion, question of God and the afterlife were just foreign to me, no religious education (D, H). No baptism, confirmation (H). Religion is crutch, rationalism (J). Substitution of politics, especially communism (D, J, N).
Weak Religious upbringing

Church of England, not very strong (F, M). Not gone to church for years (E). Indifferent Roman Catholic upbringing (Q). No religion or theology. Methodist but not heavy handed, Christian by default (K). Sent to Church till early teens (M). Attached for sake of community (J). Baptised (L).

Strong religious upbringing

Lived next door to Church, confirmed. Frog-marched to church for years (F). Very chapel when young – memory lingers on (G). Quite religious, went to Sunday school and services every week, Christened, confirmed, Christian home (O, P, R).

What were your own family’s reactions to the proposed conversion?

Emotional

Supportive (A, C, H). Daughter at service felt ‘great sense of peace about things’ (C). Surprise (G). Jewish father’s family pleased (I, L). Mother not pro-Jewish but didn’t mind if daughter became a Jew (I).

Theological

Questions about changing God (C). Not sure why I should keep to one God (H).

Social

Father’s friends and business colleagues already Jewish (A).

Rejection

Seemed like against involvement in any religion (J). Seen as rejection of father’s decision to be baptised (L). Can’t practice when mother is around as she sees it as rejection (L). Mother anti, sees it as rejection (J).

Family/social

Problems of Christmas (B).

Neutral

Not bothered, not being religious, they didn’t see it as a problem. Open-minded (A). Accepted – they were happy if I was happy (E). Didn’t understand what was involved (E). Oh very nice. Sister blanked out Jewish origins (L).

Good vibes

Mother would have changed herself if she’d had the chance (Q), Took it in their stride (O).
Angry

Worried that Holocaust would happen again (N). Angry at hostility from daughter’s Jewish boyfriend’s family (M), I was ostracised by my family (R).

What reaction/support/help did you receive from your partner’s family before/during the conversion process?

Before:

Horror

Disappointment, not a nice Jewish girl (A). If you’re marrying him I’m not coming (to the service), (changed immediately to) oh yes I will (G). Appalled, sat shivah (P). She has to convert (M, P). Didn’t like idea of him marrying non-Jewish girl till they realised I kept kosher (O). Pressure to drop her (M).

Involvement in Reform Synagogue

For his family, becoming a Reform Jew was like taking him away from his roots. Prejudice against Reform even though secular Jews (B).

Good vibes

There was an excitement in the beginning that I was doing it and everybody was participating (A). Constant hints conversion may be in offing and that would make her a good Jewish woman, icing on the cake (E). Accepted by family from word go invited every Friday night for dinner (Q). Pleased (D-a).

During:

Didn’t provide a role model (A).

What were the high points of the course?

Emotional

Felt special (A), happy (B). Feeling of excitement (B). Felt rabbi had faith in my ability (A). Felt absolutely comfortable (A), unusual and very different from anything else (L). Meaningful (K). Sorry course ended (B, D).

Social
Felt part of social group (A, B). All embarking on something together (B). Found right values for family and society (P).

Importance of making friends (A, B, F-a, E).

Academic

Partner: an amazing eye-opener, only Jewish by birth and custom before (B-a). Systematic, knew what you had to do and understood the goal (B-a). Chance to polish up knowledge I hadn’t got (D-a). Enjoyed academic work, enjoyed chance to hear different tutor’s views (D). Easy, reinforced by long experience of home life (G).

Spiritual

Partner: enjoyed discovery or Reform Judaism…actually Judaism in general, very positive (B, F).

What were the low points/difficulties of the course?

Emotional

Alienation from rest of community, child upset by exclusion from public rituals, upset by initial demand for requirements, upset by initial questions by congregation, are you Jewish? Biological conception of Jewish status difficult to take (D). Would have preferred to be honest about reason for conversion (family pressure) instead of having to maintain dark secret, found need to rebel against the rules/expectations, hard to pretend you believe in what you’re doing, frightened by waving of hands when lighting candles, seems like magic (F). Trouble with accepting other people’s expectations (F-a).

Academic

Learn all the theory but I don’t know what honey cakes look like, lack of role models (A, E). Too much to cram in, too little Hebrew (C, G). Yiddish would be useful (C). History boring, pressure on rabbinic time led to difficulties with course, difference between academic study of and involvement in (D). Too easy not enough of a challenge (E, M, L). Not much structure (H). Felt course going so long, about to fall off the top (H). Difficult to find someone in class to talk over intellectual issues (L).

Spiritual

Service taken for granted so no one explains. Difficult to convert to religious beliefs you don’t believe in (D). Services boring (D, F). No desire to carry out home rituals while on course (F). Synagogue didn’t take it seriously enough (R). Taken for granted I would light candles etc. so no one checked (I). Found services terribly alien (M). Wasn’t intruding on my beliefs, wasn’t affecting what I believed in (Jesus) (R).
Practicalities

If no family around to support, no home rituals, no experiences (D, P). Seen nothing (E). Journey too long and frightening (F).

Suggestions to improve the course:

Benefits of a secular conversion, invite others to conversion class to help integration of proselytes, ease way in by allowing involvement in minor rituals while on course, increase awareness in community of the course and so encourage others to join, first response should be wholly welcoming without presentation of hurdles (D).

Need after-care (A). Big hole in my life afterwards (E). After conversion rabbi should set medium to long-term goals and expectations for next few years (E). Needed to relate to us as individuals, our needs, not just Jewish needs (F, R). Need to question candidate about previous beliefs (R). Should be able to spot unspoken lack of enthusiasm through absenteeism from classes and services (F, R). Need support to continue (A, E). Need role model (A, P).

Need practical help with cooking etc. (A, P).

What was your religious/emotional/intellectual reaction to your appearance at the Beit Din and your visit to the mikveh?

Brit Milah

Circumcision not pleasant but not an obstacle (G).

At Beit Din, intellectual

Emphasis on sincerity not knowledge (A, E), would have liked more of a challenge (E).

Positive emotions

Gave a real high (A). Proud of myself, Enjoyed it. Excited and nervous (E). Meant an enormous amount that we had been accepted (N).

Negative emotions

Burst into tears as left (F). Intimidating own rabbi there (H). Worried would be asked to denounce my belief in Christianity (R). Terrifying, children interviewed too (D). Wish someone who was close to me had been there to share it (N). Worried would have to give spiritual commitment (D).

How reacted to change in status
Appearance not such a milestone as entering a process (D). Wasn’t any moment when I was and I wasn’t. Confirmation with a small ‘c’ of my status (C, G). Stamp of approval (J). Never felt crossed a threshold, just carrying on but on right road (C, I). Not looking for affirmation or acceptance (J).

At mikveh, spiritual high

Special occasion, can remember everything about the day (E). Spiritual experience, confusion with baptism (G)?)

At mikveh, spiritual low

Children the problem, like swimming session with the kids, busy, cheerful, enjoyable (D, N).

What support/help/reaction did your partner’s family give you after the conversion?

Initial thrill that doesn’t last

Pride (we’ll have to ask…she’ll know) that turns to resentment (A). Must be difficult to live with a religious fanatic (D-a).

Support in carrying on Judaism ceased

They stopped being Jewish, horrendously painful (A).

Acceptance

Once she was in the club that was OK, you’re acceptable now (A). Accepted from word ‘go’ (G).

Lack of Acceptance

Never really accepted me as a Jew (B). Not real Judaism, but best that could be done (F-a). Still antagonism to non-Jewish family, even at wedding, no conversion in the world was going to make it pukka for them, tragedy for everyone, no winners. Terrible to lose everyone because you marry somebody, wedding a disaster, father-in-law crying, rabbi felt he had to promise he’d deal with problems (P). Just a certificate (F).

Emotional reaction to conversion

No praise, no celebration, no welcome as a Jew (E).

How did your attitude/feelings change immediately after conversion?
Short-term intense involvement

Holier than thou syndrome, became a real pain in the proverbial (A). Felt I had found what I needed and wanted (P). Religious mania for a while (P). Convenience factor soon became paramount in pattern of observance (M). Candles sometimes, family Sedarim and Chanukah (M).

Disappointment with partner

‘Hypocrisy’ reaction to partner’s desire for children to marry Jews (A). Lack of partner’s knowledge a problem.

His sister invites me, I don’t go because I don’t feel I belong and looking back, I never did really (B). Not against religion but negative feelings towards partner affect Jewish life (L). I wanted a way in, he wanted a way out (P). When abroad, not even a Seder (R). Worried about no role models, no experience of Jewish home life (A, P). Partner’s indifference a problem (P).

Emotional benefit

Proud to have achieved it. Proud to belong to such an important people (B, E).

Immediate cessation of all involvement

Felt I’m a Jew, technically. Immediately after Beit Din felt Judaism meant nothing to me (F).

How do you feel now about the conversion?

Positive:

Theological

Putting two worlds together to make a healthy path (L).

Social

Feel closer to the Jewish people (A). Think I have a role to play (K). Possible to be a convert and a full Jew (K). No conversion is ever going to change you, just add on the bits that were cut off (L). Brought an enormous dimension and warm community to my life (L).

Family

Festivals at home kept us a happily married family (Q).

Spiritual

Enriched my life tremendously (B, F). Made religious life possible for me (K). Enjoy having framework to year (K, L). And standards to live by (J, L). Help find meaning in my life (K).
Emotional

It was one of the best things I have done (A, E). Prefer term Jew by choice, but some say that trying to deny reality (K). Part of me, can't imagine not being a Jew (C, L). Feel as if being Jewish is in my bones (M). Never regretted converting (M). Always felt it's part of my life (Q). Just part of the community, don’t know anything else (O). Don’t feel part of Church life events, do if in synagogue (Q). Community is my family (A). My motivation increased (E). Happy (G). Feel very Jewish (A). What I think of myself, I started to think of myself as Jewish from the moment we decided to do it, because I don’t think you, it’s not a moment or a ceremony, it’s a state of mind, isn’t it (C)? Feeling part of the clan, belonging to Israel (F), always part of my life (O).

Longer term spiritual growth

It deepened me because I can see how a religion can affect somebody so much and how important it is (B). Seeped into my life when I was pregnant. Learnt benefits of ritual (F). Feeling of spiritual growth (F).

Negative:

Theological

I’m Christian and always have been (R). Can’t live with hypocrisy so gave it up (P).

Social

Find it difficult to reject my Englishness, but there is a conflict, feel an outsider, even as to language (Yiddish), difficult to hold onto both sides and not reject one or the other (L). There are first and second divisions and I’m on the reserve bench, can’t be Jewish inasmuch my DNA isn’t Jewish (P). Secret and unclear codes about who is what (L).

Family

Without family continuity, impossible (B, M). Problem of Christmas (A). Being Jewish is something you have to do in the home and my family aren’t Jewish (P). Nostalgia, wish I could (be involved). Worst thing is communal Sedarim, not the same thing at all (M). Very difficult for people to be involved if everybody isn’t fully (P).

Spiritual

Can’t live with hypocrisy so given it up, but I’ve not fallen out of love with my faith (P).

Emotional

Sad, big mistake, confusion and pain (R). Tragedy for all, no winners, I’m still Jewish, just don’t advertise the fact (P). Abandoned by synagogue when suffered loss of baby (B). We do it because we believe, or don’t believe, or we are not aware of what it really entails until you end up years later like me (B). I wouldn’t choose to be anything but Jewish, but I would just like to see myself saying ‘I am Jewish’ without staggering (B). Lower status to be a convert than a born Jew, lower status is passed down to children, uncomfortable as I’m on the margins, but good place to be as can empathise with others and everyone is on the margin in some area of their life (D). Not right DNA (P). I feel a fraud (L). Difficulties of trying to appear Jewish when you’re unsure of yourself (A). Wanted respect for what I had achieved but never found it (B).

Negative reaction of others

Left me angry, disappointed and let down (H). Not accepted by the Orthodox world, but doesn’t worry me (K). Have non-Jewish look, painful. Converts often get the message that they’re not quite OK, painful. Many feel uncomfortable with high profile of converts. We converts call into question their authenticity as Jews (H, K). Feel outsider. Even my wife doesn’t feel I’m a real Jew (L). The only hostility is from people who think she’s too frum (D). Told never be a proper Jew (L, H). Opposition from synagogue members to convert becoming Chair, opposition from synagogue members to convert leading services, problem is you all want to become rabbis, asked, what is it you are trying to prove (H)? Anger over JFS rejection of paternally Jewish child, converted herself by Reform Beit Din (N). Horror from work colleagues who thought we would become ‘born again’ type Jews (D-a).

Positive reactions of others

No one has made me feel I wasn’t a proper Jew (C). Totally accepted by local provincial community, so much so leads services with her son (D). Fellow congregants see the conversion as a watershed (like somebody sat silently for so long…and suddenly started speaking) (D). Orthodox friends who accept her as Jew (E). Values especially Orthodox work colleagues’ acceptance (G). Accepted as JNF worker (I).

Did your partner’s attitude to Judaism change after the conversion?

Short-term

Initial enthusiasm for community turning to bitterness (A).

Long-term

Lapsed again. No involvement in Jewish life. Anger at synagogue. No pressure on children to learn. Turns up to odd High Holydays (A-a). Obsessed with son’s Jewish education (worries because his older children have married out) (B).

Realised not necessary to be constrained by Halacha – all or nothing syndrome – Reform OK.

‘God is One’ become central theme of my life. Set scene for spiritual and personal growth. Thinking of becoming a rabbi. Realised ritual not be all and end all (F-a). I am much more kosher than I certainly ever was (A-a). Taking High Holyday services (F-a). He wanted way out, wouldn’t involve himself in any way (P). An unfairness between us (P). I was more religious in the end than the man I was going to marry (Q).

What were your partner’s thoughts/feelings about conversion after the event?

Positive feelings

Good converted partner never reminded of former status. Partner’s conversion actually did me a favour.

Partner brought the girls up Jewish, which is smashing. So that’s really good news. Made life more interesting. New circle of friends (A-a).

I’m Jewish, children are Jewish and that’s what he wants (R).

How do you live your Jewish life now?

Personal and home life:

My preparations for Pesach were spot on, but I have learnt that actually you don’t have to go completely overboard (A). Keep shabbat (A). No Christmas tree (C). Modified kashrut (A, C, E, F, G, H). Jewish library (D, E, I).

Individual family ritual rather than community religious involvement, want less involvement on the practical level so can get something out of it for myself, spiritually, mostly interested in unofficial gatherings, meditation, healing, so nice to have space in your lives (J). Bought ritual objects (D). Mezzuzah (E, I), Married under Huppah (G). Candles (A, B, C, E, F, G, H). Festivals (B, C, G, H, I). Services (H). Only lit candles if Jewish family present (R). Sedarim boring (F).

In synagogue:

Community and admin

Total involvement in cheder led to resentment. social instead of religious involvement (A). No synagogue involvement, don’t feel I belong there (F). Organise informal social events (E). Served on synagogue council (G). Treasurer (A-a, J). Warm feeling of community support (A), feel easy with the community (E). Blessed and lucky to find community (N). Resentment of community’s expectations that children will have good knowledge and be involved (A). Respond to community and God and live life with integrity (K). Seeking positive place in community to work in (J). Acted as Ladies’ Guild Chairmen, started Friendship club, arranged kiddushim, organised Sedarim, getting involved was useful (O). Should be open places for community. Dependant on community feeling and participation (I).
Spiritually and ritually

Uninhibitedly engage in public rituals (D). Finding services predictable and therefore boring (D). Rosh Hodesh group while it was running (A). Services so long yet no time for quiet reflection (F). Likes Orthodox services – amusing, can talk (D, F). Takes Orthodox services (D). Warden (G). Trained as service leader (H). Left synagogue politics to commune with God (H). More religious. More interested in religious affairs (E). Intrinsically religious and spiritual being (A). Attends Friday evening services (G). Never even fasted on Yom Kippur (F). Takes shabbat and festivals off work (I). No synagogue, candles, kashrut, Seder (R). Won’t work on shabbat or festivals. Seemed to slip into place (M). Duality of spiritual and physical (N). Religion should be enjoyable and calming (I). New interest in spiritual matters (E). Didn’t expect spirituality from conversation (J). Don’t have to be religious to come to synagogue (I). Take children’s services (I). Attend adult education courses. Reading (D, N, K).

God

Belief in God (A, C). The notion that we could be here, the world could be here, if there hadn’t been a God, it really doesn’t make sense (C). Belief in a God that listens (A). No belief in God (B). After Holocaust can’t believe in Omnipotent God (D). God doesn’t worry about kashrut (E). Same God as before (E). God as creator (I). No creed, that’s important. Doesn’t require me to go through acrobatics of faith (N).

Torah

Miss it if I don’t hear it, basic part of religious life, word of God but not written by God (I). How to live, basic rules (C).

Don’t need manmade framework (P). Code for life, don’t worry if it’s divine or not (I). Greatest story ever told (I).

Messianic age

Not Messiah (P).

Prayer

Belief in the power of prayer of all religions (A). Uplift from services (C).

Mitzvot

Judaism is important as it applies to daily life (B). Never impose will on others for religious reasons (G-a). Secular Israeli in-laws and husband ignore mitzvot, thus so can I (F). Freedom of action not everything (F). Fitting in your faith with modern living (H).

Ethics

Justice. Right behaviour (N).
Interfaith

Sharing religious beliefs is important (A). No religion is superior to any other religion (E).

In wider Jewish community

In wider community

Jewish input into non-Jewish nursery, as live in country, need to stand up more for Judaism (E). Talked to cub groups (I). Takes appropriate festival food to work to share, talks to non-Jewish youth groups (I).

Social

Social contacts important part of life (E, F, G). Synagogue is very social place. Like to be fully involved and improve things (J).

Are your children involved in the community?

In education

In family ritual

Won’t let a Friday night go by without the candles coming out (A). No Chanukah, Friday nights, Purim or Seder (R). Enjoyed meeting Jewish family but doesn’t identify with them (P). Individual family rather than community involvement (A). Gives child joy (F).

In synagogue ritual

Cheder and children’s services with father (A). Bar and Bat Mitzvah (G, N). Involvement in local home services (D). Never been to synagogue (P).

Shows interest

Secretary of JSoc (D). Wants to be a rabbi (D), Decided wanted to be Jew too, pleased (N).
Shows no interest

Child: ‘I’m not really interested in all this.’ Pre-teen already rejecting synagogue life (A, L).

Social

Problems in provinces finding Jewish friends (D, E).

Identity

Made it clear to family that son would be brought up a Jew (E). No Jewish partners but express Jewish identity (N, Q). Thankfulness adult children married Jews and involved in synagogue. Grandchildren: don’t know anything else (O) They belong to neither world. They ask, ‘please don’t tell anyone we’re Jewish’ (P). Feel children are really Church of England (R). I see children’s Jewishness as a blessing, they don’t. Felt children should be citizens of the world (P).

In wider community

Taught to respect other religions (E). If brought home non-Jewish girl, would have to welcome her (A, E). Fantasies about Jewish partners (P).

Have you faced any difficulties after the process that touched on the conversion?

Practical

Lack of role models. Practice not theory, no experience Jewish home life. No female role models (P, A). No Jewish family after divorce (P). Need to learn through osmosis and experience (P).

Emotional

Difficult to learn the feelings of being Jewish. Difficulty of trying to appear as a Jew when you’re so unsure of yourself (A). Need to talk about the conversion not met. There was no follow up and you need this support, and that’s what’s made me bitter (A, B). Feels deeply the problem of the Law of Return (A, I). Being asked to explain your Jewish roots in a group session. Problems of being a marginal Jew (D). Basic prejudice against converts, people make the most unkind comments (K, I). Experienced almost violent anti-Israel prejudice, hard to cope with (I). Meet reserve, Have to work harder to earn respect and trust (K).

Social

I think you have to put more emphasis not on the religion but in your place in Jewish society and that wasn’t done because that’s not what we believe it’s going to be (A).

spiritual
Difficulties of approaching the rabbi for help when you’ve officially graduated (A). Daughter’s illness, I got so choked up about what had happened, it was one of the reasons I didn’t go (to services) (A). No Jewish service for a stillborn so attend Christian memorial service at the crematorium (B).

Family

Lack of husband’s knowledge and involvement (A). Conflict – felt loss of Jewish ritual at father’s death (A). After husband’s death couldn’t bear to go to synagogue (Q). Never invited to any Jewish family event (P).

Health

Community support when facing breast cancer real help (E).

Stories of other converts.

Negative experiences

They just sort of melt away. We are all disintegrating (B). Those wanting to marry wanted the course to finish quickly (C). Where pressured to convert, marriages often not happy (E). Married into wealthy family and then disappeared over the hills, which was quite common (I).

Positive experiences

In suburban communities they tend to stay with them. I think because they start off as part of the community and they stay as part of the community (C).

APPENDIX 5. HYPOTHESES

Some of the specific hypotheses that were investigated:

1. The effect of the partner and the family on the convert and the conversion

- When the conversion takes place for the purpose of (or in the context of) a marriage to a born Jew, the level of Jewish practice carried out after the conversion echoes the level of Jewish practice carried out by the born Jew before the marriage.

- When the conversion takes place for the purpose of (or in the context of) a marriage to a born Jew, the active support of the Jewish family and spouse are instrumental in the success or otherwise of the conversion taking place. (But we only have data on successful conversions).

- Very observant or very secular families will be less supportive of the convert or the conversion process than those from moderately observant homes.

- Support by the Jewish partner increases the chance of the convert developing a positive Jewish identity and a higher level of observance.

- When a divorce occurs, this increases the chance of the erosion of the Jewish identity of the convert.

- The death of the Jewish partner will increase the chance of the erosion of the Jewish identity of the convert.

- Conversion of the mother in the family does not positively affect the involvement of the children of the marriage in Judaism.

- The converts who retain a higher level of observances are more likely to have Jewish grandchildren.

- The converts who retain a higher level of beliefs are more likely to have Jewish grandchildren.

- Those who convert Lishma (for personal religious motives) are more likely to retain a strong Jewish identity in all areas if they marry another practising Jew.

- Patrilineal Jews who convert increase the chances of the retention of Jewish practice/belief system if they marry another practising Jew.

2. The effect of age at conversion
• Older converts are more likely to retain Jewish identity than younger converts.

3. Religious upbringing/interest in of convert

• The religious upbringing of the convert makes little difference to the level of Jewish observances/Jewish beliefs retained after conversion.

• Converts who convert for religious reasons are more likely to retain Jewish practice and involvement in ritual.

• As the years pass, converts will go to synagogue less often but retain basic family ritual events in the home.

• The relationship between short-term religious enthusiasm immediately after conversion and long term Jewish involvement is very weak.

• There is likely to be a relationship between positive feelings now about the conversion and involvement in community.

• There is a connection between positive experiences of Jews and Judaism when growing up and a later decision made to convert.

4. Motivation

• Religious motivation is likely to be one of the more potent drivers behind the decision to convert.

• Those converting as singles or those in a long term relationship with a non-Jew will regard religious issues as a potent driver in their desire to convert.

• Those brought up in non-religious homes will regard religious issues as a potent driver in their desire to convert.

• Those brought up in mixed households will regard religious issues as a potent driver in their desire to convert.

• Those brought up as Anglicans will not regard religious issues as a potent driver in their desire to convert.

• Those experiencing pressure from the family of their Jewish partner to convert will score low in the potency of religious factors in their desire to convert.

5. The effect of the course
• Satisfaction or otherwise with the course is unlikely to have any lasting effect on the retention of Jewish practice/or identity/or beliefs.

• Social relationships made while in the class are likely to have a positive outcome on the retention of involvement in the community.

6. The effect of the Jewish partner’s family.

• Those who convert because of pressure from their Jewish partner or from the Jewish family are less likely to retain their Jewish practice/ are less likely to retain their Jewish belief system/ are less likely to retain their Jewish identity.

• When the convert is welcomed from the start by the born Jew’s family, this increases the chance of the retention of Jewish practice/ increases the chance of the retention of a Jewish belief system.

• Positive continuing support from their partner, the Jewish family or the community helps the retention of the convert’s Jewish involvement.

7. The effect of the convert’s own family

• Negative reactions that continue past the conversion from the convert’s own family are likely to have a negative effect on the retention of Jewish practice.

APPENDIX 7. THE SURVEY

Thank you so much for helping with this survey. It has been designed to find out as much as we can about the process of conversion and the way people feel about Judaism after conversion. We are interested in the views of anybody who has converted whether or not they still regard themselves as Jewish.

Our aim is both to understand the effects of conversion and to make the process more meaningful for those whom we shall welcome as proselytes in the future.

Who should answer? Anyone who at some time in their life has converted to Judaism through the Reform Beit Din, whatever their current faith, affiliation or viewpoint.

If this description does not apply to you, we would be extremely grateful if you could pass the questionnaire on to someone you know who does match the description.

How long does the questionnaire take? Most questions can be answered simply by ticking a box. You should be able to complete the survey within 45 minutes.

Confidentiality. The questionnaire is completely confidential. The research team has no way of identifying who has responded. (The code number on the envelope is used by our administration department to record the fact that someone from your address has responded. It is destroyed before the envelope is opened and the questionnaire is passed to the research team with no identifying marks).

When. We would be extremely grateful if you could fill out this survey within the next few days.

Further information. If you require any further information or wish to discuss any aspect of this survey, please contact Rabbi Jacqui Tabick on [redacted] (or by email: [redacted])
SECTION 1: THE CONVERSION PROCESS AND HOW TO IMPROVE IT

YOUR DECISION

Horror □   Don’t Know □

38. If the family had a negative reaction, did they ignore you?  Yes□   No□

39. And did they apply pressure on their son/daughter to end relationship?
   Yes □   No □   Don’t Know □

40. AFTER THE RELATIONSHIP WAS FIRMLY ESTABLISHED BUT BEFORE CONVERSION:
   Using the same scale as above, how would you describe the Jewish family’s reaction to the relationship once it became clear you were committed to each other
Welcoming and supportive □   Fairly positive □   Reluctant acceptance □ Disappointment □
Horror □   Don’t Know □

41. If the family still had a negative reaction, did they ignore you?  Yes□   No□

42. And did they apply pressure on their son/daughter to end relationship?
   Yes □   No □   Don’t Know □
43. Did the Jewish family apply any pressure on you to convert to Judaism now that the relationship was established?

- Yes, strong pressure
- Yes, subtle pressure/hints
- I was encouraged, but not pressured
- No active encouragement, but I knew they wanted it
- They thought it irrelevant and did not encourage me in any way

44. How would you describe the Jewish family’s level of religious observance when you first met your partner?

- Highly assimilated and not very conscious of their Jewishness
- Non-observant (secular), but aware of their Jewishness
- Kept some rituals (eg Seder), but did not keep a Kosher home or more demanding rituals
- Fairly observant and traditional (eg kept Kashrut), but did not keep all the Sabbath laws
45. DURING YOUR CONVERSION: How did your partner’s family react to you during the conversion process? Using the same scale as earlier, please describe their attitude:

- Welcoming and supportive
- Fairly positive
- Reluctant acceptance
- Disappointment
- Horror
- Don’t Know

46. If the family still had a negative reaction did they:

- Continue to ignore you? Yes ☐ No ☐

Table A8.3. Proportions of converts by location of communities and passing decades

Source: Ledgers of the Beit Din
The proportions of candidates presenting in Central London, the suburbs or the provinces have changed over the years and statistically significant differences have been revealed ($\chi^2 = 275, \ p \leq 0.001$).

- In the earliest period, with few choices available, the greatest number of candidates presented themselves through synagogues in Central London, most notably, West London Synagogue of British Jews. The preponderance of London candidates can be explained by the fact that there has always been far more Jews in the capital. The proportion of each succeeding decade converting in central London has steadily declined.

- The proportion of each decade who convert through the suburban congregations has remained fairly steady.

- These two sets of figures might reflect the greater confidence London Jews may feel in being able to maintain at least their secular Jewish connections even if they remain in a mixed marriage.

- A big rise has occurred in the proportion converting in the provinces despite the probable overall decline of provincial Jewish communities. Partly this growth may have come about because of the rise of the numbers of Provincial congregations, so applicants have an increasing greater chance of being able to convert wherever they live, but it may also have come about because of the perceived need in smaller communities to convert if one wishes to be part of the local Jewish community.

- In addition, it might reflect the relative lack of possible Jewish marriage partners in the vicinity.

- It might also reflect the life-style choice of the Jews who might choose to live in an area, outside of the provincial areas of Manchester and Leeds, of generally low Jewish population.

- The figures show a slight growth in recent decades of actual candidates coming from abroad to have their conversion ratified by the Reform Beit Din. These are candidates taught mainly in Israel or in Europe, especially Germany and the Former Soviet Union, where until very recently, no Reform Beit Din existed. This increase reflects the end of the Soviet Union and the greater freedom for Jews from that area to seek to regularize their Jewish status. A court has now been established in Europe so it is probable that this number will fall again in the future.

Around 70% of the constituents of the Movement for Reform Judaism are members of London congregations. As Table 6.7 indicates, in 1993-2002 the home communities of the applicants to the Beit Din do not reflect these proportions. This may have a bearing on future strategy.
A8.3. The size of the synagogues where converts have chosen to convert

The Movement for Reform Judaism for the last few years has graded congregations according to their size for the purpose of helping to decide rabbinic salaries. The grading does not have precise size limits – other factors are included in the classification - but in general the grouping can be used as an indication of size. For example, Edgware with a membership of 8,117 in 2002 was in Group 5, North West Surrey Synagogue (membership 424) was in Group 3, Blackpool (membership 76) was in Group 1.

This same codification has been used as a basis to ascertain which approximate size of congregation has sent the most candidates through to the Beit Din and enable the study of how size of congregation might have affected the outcome of the conversion. Group 1 synagogues are the smallest, Group 5 the largest. Obviously, this analysis is limited in that total numbers must be mitigated over the fifty year period by how long the congregation has been in existence: the shorter time the synagogue has been in existence, the less chance of applicants.31

The other challenge is that the size of congregations may vary over the years, but there are no records available to help resolve this. Certainly the general proportions between the membership of the congregations has remained fairly static, i.e. West London, Edgware and North Western Reform Synagogue have always been the largest followed by the main suburban synagogues, Finchley, Hendon, Middlesex New, South West Essex and Settlement and Southgate. They have now been joined by Maidenhead which is just outside the Greater London area.

The proportions of the candidates coming from the various synagogues has changed over the years. This difference is statistically significant. ($\chi^2 = 451, p < 0.001$

Table A8.4. Number of converts, by size of synagogue and passing decades

Source: Ledgers of the Beit Din

Note: Size of synagogue is on a scale of 1-5, as defined by Movement for Reform Judaism. Group 5 are the largest synagogues, Group 1 the smallest.

- It is not surprising that Group 5 synagogues provided the greatest proportion of applicants up to 1972 as there were not that many other congregations.

- The proportion of candidates attending Group 1 synagogues increased significantly over the 50 year period under study. Possibly in less Jewish areas, where most of these congregations are to be found, a greater pressure is felt upon those in a mixed relationship for the non-Jewish partner to convert, or this may reflect, in some cases where these congregations are in the provinces, a lack of suitable Jewish marriage partners.

- Similarly, the proportion of candidates from Group 3 congregations has also increased significantly. Again, these synagogues tend not to be situated in the Jewish heartland of North West or Central London, but they have rabbis on staff who can facilitate conversions.

- The proportion of those coming from the Group 5 congregations has decreased significantly. This trend might have arisen because in the larger congregations, in areas of a larger Jewish population, there is a greater chance for Jews to find a Jewish partner, or maybe there is less pressure for the non-Jewish partner to convert as Jewish life can continue for the Jewish partner through secular/ethnic channels.

The number of converts coming from the larger and smaller synagogues can be related to the size of the communities. The Beit Din ledgers show the number of converts put forward by each synagogue; the Movement for Reform Judaism (MRJ) has provided information on the size (the adult membership) of each synagogue.

The membership of each synagogue is not readily available for the earlier years, so this analysis has been done for two periods, 1983 –1992 and 1993-2002.

The average number of converts per year per 1000 members has been used as a measure of the number of converts in relation to the size of the synagogues.

Table A8.5. The number of converts in relation to the size of the synagogue

Source: Beit Din ledgers (number of converts); Movement for Reform Judaism (membership)

Notes:

(1) The membership for 1982-93 is the membership for 1993. The membership for 1993-2002 is the average membership for the ten years.

(2) Group is an indicator of size, Group 5 synagogues have the largest memberships, Group 1 have the smallest memberships.
This Table shows the relative number of converts increases as the size of the synagogue decreases. The increase is particularly marked for the smallest synagogues (Group 1) which have, on average, 13-16 converts per 1000 members.

Group 2-5 synagogues have slightly lower proportions of converts in 1993-200 compared to the previous decade, Group 1 synagogues have a higher proportion of converts in the second decade.

The largest synagogues (Group 5) are in London, the smallest synagogues (Group 1) are mainly outside London.

In the 2002 document produced by the Movement for Reform Judaism, there are nine synagogues in Group 1 (Beit Klal Yisrael, Beth Shalom, Blackpool, Bradford, Harlow, Hull, Milton Keynes, Shir Hayim and Thanet). Their average membership is just under 100 for each synagogue. They have about 2-3 converts each, each year, on average (average = 2.5 converts per synagogue per year for the period 1983-2002).

Seeing that in 2002 members of group 1 and 2 congregations constituted around 16% of the total membership of the Reform Movement and the three group 5 congregations alone consisted of 32% of the Movement and together with group 4 congregations 68% of the movement, this statistic seems to suggest that a disproportionately higher proportion of proselytes come from the smaller communities and the Group 3 communities.
