

City Research Online

City, University of London Institutional Repository

Citation: Davies, J. (2015). Observations on a public health walk. Paper presented at the Mission Biodiversity: Choosing new paths for conservation, 2-6 Aug 2015, Montpellier, France.

This is the accepted version of the paper.

This version of the publication may differ from the final published version.

Permanent repository link: <https://openaccess.city.ac.uk/id/eprint/13807/>

Link to published version:

Copyright: City Research Online aims to make research outputs of City, University of London available to a wider audience. Copyright and Moral Rights remain with the author(s) and/or copyright holders. URLs from City Research Online may be freely distributed and linked to.

Reuse: Copies of full items can be used for personal research or study, educational, or not-for-profit purposes without prior permission or charge. Provided that the authors, title and full bibliographic details are credited, a hyperlink and/or URL is given for the original metadata page and the content is not changed in any way.

On the walk, the unexpectedly frequent distribution of barbed and razor wire soon became apparent.

 North Middlesex

Public Health walk developed from the psychogeography 'dérive' developed by Guy Debord in France in the 1950s

Awareness of Great War memorials in 2014. Continuity and change with other memorials.

Nursing students walk in urban areas to develop an understanding of open spaces as a health resource : an award winning initiative

 UCLH

 Hackney

Students develop nursing skills as they use all five senses to observe in the real three dimensional world

:p <:

Sir Keith Pearson and Dame Christine Beasley awarding Jacqueline Davies the Health Education North Central and East London Quality Award for Innovation 2014.

Royal London

 Mile End

 Bart's

river Thames

19th century public health innovation to provide safe drinking water, now overtaken by a culture of canned drinks.

JPDavies

Intrigued by the flower planter, with the BH initials. A lead container that Angela recognised as originally used as a water cistern. We wondered about containing drinking water in a lead container