TABLE 1.2: Sources for Table 1.1

No.	Sources
1	Carlo Besozzi, 28 Etudes pour Hautbois, herzien van frazering en nuancering door Jaap Stotijn (Wormerveer: Edition Molenaar, 1967); Burgess and Haynes, The Oboe , 87; Haynes, Music for Oboe 1650-1800 , 69. According to the last source, etudes nos. 1, 4 and 6 were published by André as part of the Garnier method. The modern version contains mistakes and appears heavily edited. The occurrence of numerous low c#s implies that the collection may not be original. Keys may also have been transposed. See footnotes 79 and 129 in Chapter 1.
2	Eitner, 4, 474.
3	Handbuch 1828, 313; Warner, 84; Haynes, Music for Oboe 1650-1800 , 1. The work is apparently lost. According to Riley, its publication date is 1780. See Maurice W. - 52-55 Ergänzungsband zum Handbuch 1828, 1187; Grove Music Online 2007; Bigotti, 36; Booze, 31; Burgess, FoMRHI Quarterly, 76 (July 1994), 32; Pazdírek letter V, 109; Brown, 106.

From the publishing dates given, only those of 1837 and 1931 are reliable (although the latter belongs firmly in the twentieth century and the authenticity of its author is questionable). The date 1829 for Op. 12 is deduced from the relative volume of the Handbuch and the opus numbers of later compositions. The date 1843 is the latest possible date for the Bachmann editions and the same is valid for entry no.28.
- 57, 58 Handbuch 1828, 313; Handbuch 1839-43, 105; Handbuch 1892-97, 466; Verzeichnis 1894, 199; Burgess and Haynes, The Oboe, 361; Warner, 85. According to Riley, publication date for the Schule was 1831 and the opus number is the same with the Principes. See Maurice W. Riley, 'A Tentative Bibliography of Early Wind Instrument Tutors', Journal of Research in Music Education, 6, 1 (Spring 1958), 11.
- 59-62 Grove Music Online 2007; Fiala, 24-25; Burgess and Haynes, The Oboe, 348; Hošek, 21.

- 65 Handbuch 1829-33, 63; Monatsbericht 1833 (Nov.-Dec.), 88; Brown, 93; Joppig and McColl: 50 klassische Studien für Oboe (Vienna: Universal, 1983), ii, 46-60. The latter is supposedly based on an autograph by W. Benicke, Leipzig, around 1880. According to this source, the title is '12 Concertante Oboe Etuden opus 77'. This source suggests that Schmitt was born in 1835 and died in 1907. This contradicts the publication date of the Handbuch and the Monatsbericht, unless they were not by the same composer. Close inspection of the studies suggests that this cannot be an early-nineteenth century work.

- 118 Hošek, 22. It is not possible to confirm that this piece was written in the nineteenth century. The known members of the Danish Barth family (see Krause, 4-6) are Christian Frederik (1787-1861), Christian Samuel (1735-1809) and F. Philipp Christian (1774-1804). Thereafter, the reliability of the source is questionable. If this is a piece by one of the Barth oboists, it must have accordingly been written up to 1861.

- 178-186 Bonelli, n.p.n.; Bigotti; Hošek, 34; Brown, 82. Prestini's lifespan and lack of more information makes the validation of the dates of his compositions difficult. Another problem is that all references are found in the twentieth-century sources and no original sources have survived. Fiala does not include him in her dissertation. Some of the works listed are theoretical.
- 187-190 Bonelli, n.p.n.; Hošek, 36. Similar problems in dating with Prestini.

⁶ There are two copies of this piece in the British Library. Both are piano arrangements of the specific part of the opera. The one dated [1885?] is by Spehr, pl. no. 2438 (just two digits away from pl. no. 2440 of the 48 Studies) and has a typeface identical to that of the Studies. The other copy which is dated [1837] bears no cover page, no publisher and no pl. no. The typeface is different between the two copies, and the articulated notes bear strokes in place of staccato dots which appear in the Spehr copy. The Spehr copy is very similar in appearance to that of the 48 Studies. It may be regarded as another piece of evidence in favour of dating Op. 31 at 1837. The opera was first performed in 1836.
